The new Victorian cedar greenhouse from Alton.

Few would argue with the fact that the Victorians knew a thing or two about elegance. And the new cedar greenhouse from Alton is a celebration of classic Victorian style.

The high, 45° roof pitch and the tall narrow panes are unmistakably of an era when designers and architects became household names.

True to Victorian tradition, we don't let impeccable design compromise functionality. The extra height in conjunction with good ventilation means more air is circulating around the greenhouse, a must for healthier plants and more produce.

The Alton Victorian is crafted using only the highest quality Western Red Cedar from sustainable sources. The cedar is then treated with either a natural golden honey preservative, or coated in a special white or green paint to look superb in any garden setting.

Cedar contributes to thermal efficiency, helping to produce a greenhouse that stays warm in winter and cool in summer. With an inherent resistance to rot combined with a pleasant aroma that repels many insects, the new Alton Victorian cedar greenhouse is the ideal place to grow your own vegetables and flowers.

The Victorian is available in three widths 1963mm (6' 5¼"), 2331mm (7' 7¾"), 3061mm (10' 0½") and seven lengths from 1625mm (5' 4") to 6236mm (20' 5"). If you're considering something larger please call 0800 085 0005 to discuss your requirements.

Included as standard:

Toughened safety glass - Helps keep you and your family safe.
